The archive of the Moldavian Metropolitan Church was transferred in Poland in 1686 after the military campaign of the Polish King Jan III Sobiecki. Many Romanian historians searched for this archive, but they did not obtain any result. The Zolkiewensis index, published at the end of 19th century, contains the inventory of the Metropolitan archive. The author of the article discovered the first original from this archive during a research study in Poland, Warsaw, at Archiwum Główny Akt Dawnych. The document was transferred there together with other documents from the Radziwiłł archive from today's territory of Belarus.
