The present paper includes noteworthy information about Constantin Stere's brief activity within the “Norodnaya Volya” revolutionary movement in Russia, in the years 1883-1884. This period of Stere's life has not been investigated enough, just like the period of his exile to Siberia. For the elaboration of this article, documentary sources preserved in the document collection of “3rd Bureau of the Imperial Chancellery of His Majesty” were used. According to the researched materials, C. Stere was one of the most active participants in the Narodnaya groups from Kishinev at the beginning of the '80s in the 19th century. Because of this, he was one of the active members from Kishinev exiled to Siberia, where he served an eight-year punishment.
